Volcano Smoke.

Mr. Lyons, of the Weather Bureau, informs the BULLETIN that the thick clouds of volcanic smoke hanging over the Islands arrive here from the scene of action in the following manner:

The heat rising from the active crater causes the volumes of smoke to rise to an elevation of between 10,000 and 20,000 feet, when they reach the upper current. They are floated along in this upper current until they come down into the lower current, and are caught by the trade winds, by which they are blown over the Islands.
